Game Concept

A short game presented using a comic-book visual style, with comic-style blocks and panels forming the game's environments and overall presentation.

The gameplay will revolve around light as a central element, with the player interacting with or using light to navigate the environment and overcome challenges.

The experience will build toward a twist that changes the player's understanding of the events or world they have experienced throughout the game.

Theme Integration

Comic

The game will use a comic-inspired visual presentation, including comic-style blocks, panels, visual effects and other elements inspired by comic books.

Light

Light will be incorporated into the core gameplay, giving the player a meaningful way to interact with and understand the game world.

Twist

The game will gradually establish an initial understanding of the world before revealing information that changes the player's interpretation of what they have experienced.

Gameplay & Scope

The goal is to create a focused 10–15 minute experience with a small number of levels or sections.

The game will focus on:

- One primary gameplay mechanic involving light.
- Simple player movement and interaction.
- Comic-inspired environments and presentation.
- Gradually introduced gameplay challenges.
- A clear progression toward the final twist.
- A complete beginning-to-end gameplay loop.

The project will prioritize a complete and polished experience rather than a large amount of content. The final game will be designed to be playable within approximately 10–15 minutes.

Development

The game will be developed entirely during the game jam period. The project will use original code and assets created during the event, along with permitted third-party and AI-generated assets where applicable. All third-party assets and AI usage will be disclosed in the project repository as required by the event rules.
